Investing in private company securities is not suitable for all investors, is highly speculative and high risk, and you should be prepared to withstand a total loss of your investment. Private company securities are highly illiquid and there is no guarantee that a market will develop for such securities. Each investment carries its own risks, and you should conduct your own due diligence regarding the investment, including obtaining independent professional advice. Reference to company names or use of third-party trademarks or logos does not imply any affiliation between TSGCA or its affiliates and any company, any endorsement or sponsorship of TSGCA or its affiliates by any company or vice versa, or any partnership, joint venture or other commercial relationship between TSGCA or its affiliates and any company. Rights with respect to any company marks referred to herein are, as between TSGCA and its affiliates and such companies, owned by the company.
